RESEARCH AS PARTICIPATION IN THE PROCESS OF KNOWLEDGE

3 - 6 MARCH 2022

How does asking and living with questions shape our thoughts and attitudes towards ourselves and the events in the world?

Can research help us navigate uncertainty and steer the path of our own becoming more consciously?

What characterizes approaches to research inspired by anthroposophy and how do they relate to conventional methods?

What can we contribute to the world through our questions and commitment to truth?

We warmly invite you to participate in our Research School Colloquium. Together with our pilot school program participants, we will immerse in what it means to develop research grounded on Anthroposophy as young people. In the spirit of our previous winter conferences, "February Days", the colloquium is an event to deepen our learning.

Since 2021, a group of young researchers has explored anthroposophical approaches to research guided by the research team at the Youth Section. We will discuss our research initiatives at this event and seek ways to nurture our workplaces and communities through knowledge. An opportunity to meet others in the spirit of questions, support peers in furthering their work and connect to the Goetheanum - School of Spiritual Science in person at the Campus or online.

Anyone, regardless of their academic experience, is welcome to attend. Just bring your questions, curiosity and interest in learning with you! The program is recommended for people aged 20 - 35. To express your interest in attending and receiving more information about the program, please contact mail@youthsection.org. A detailed schedule of the event will follow shortly.
